Sabbatical leave must be taken for one continuous period. You may not split it into several shorter periods or cash it out.

1. Compensation for the term of Sabbatical Leave: The Company will not be liable to pay any compensation of whatsoever nature to the employees during the term of their sabbatical leave.

The individual will need to return to work and remain in the system for a minimum of 60 days in case of resignation or will be required to give 2 (two months)' notice period or two months of gross salary.

Legal action will be pursued if the notice period or two months' gross salary payment is not made by the employee.

When you return from your sabbatical, you will generally return to the same or a substantially comparable position to the one you held before your sabbatical.
